Following is an excerpt:

The U.S. FDA’s formation of the Digital Health Center of Excellence (DHCoE) was heralded as a key enabler of digital health technologies, but the news hasn’t necessarily had the expected effect. The agency’s December 2021 draft guidance on the use of digital health technologies to assist in the conduct of clinical trials is still in regulatory drydock. ...

Writing for the coalition was Brad Thompson of Epstein Becker Green, who said the scope of the guidance should include any DHTs that might be used by ...
